

Prior to registering on Indiana's "No Call" List, we received numerous unwanted phone solicitations daily—especially in the evening. These calls have a dramatic negative impact on the quality of our lives—and the temperament of those receiving them. There are so many other ways for salespeople to pitch their products (our lives are already inundated with advertising) that intrusive, in-your-face methods such as phone solicitation are unnecessary, offensive and just plain over the line! To phone people who have clearly indicated they don't want the contact (such as registering on a do-not-call list) is not only rude, it is an act of aggression. I strenuously oppose any measure that would allow me and my family to be a target of sales attacks in the sanctity of our home.
